Information And Links On Over 100 Major Cruise Ships In Service Today

As the travel industry entered the twenty-first century an amazing thing happened. The popularity of cruising was growing rapidly and cruise line companies reacted by launching a whole new generation of mega-ships. To attract passengers they added amusement parks, dozens of gourmet restaurants, water features, nightclubs, sports facilities, spas and more. They are marvels of engineering and have become actual floating resort destinations. In the last century the aircraft carrier was the unchallenged behemoth of the seas but now in comparison they are shorter and while still wider, the new class of cruise ships have significantly more length, mass, and total displacement.

Not only are these wonders a total, all inclusive resort experience that puts most land based resorts to shame. They also take their guests on an adventure, visiting countries and wonders all around the world. No other experience comes even close.

Not sure what cruise line to explore or ships to consider? Here you'll find the most complete list of current cruise ships anywhere with hyper-links to each. Every ship listing includes the date launched, size, number of passengers and most recent refurbishment. Each ship listing also includes a link to its cruise line description page for additional information.

The following listings offer key information for understanding and comparing cruise ships, including:

Refurb (refurbishment) - At the least that means new furniture and upgraded decor, but major refurbishments can also mean new redesigns adding features like more restaurants and lounges and more space allocated to spas, lounges and pool areas.

Date the Ship Entered Service - How old a ship is matters. Each new generation incorporates more features that older ships normally cannot be upgraded to later on.

GT or Gross Tons - Just like age, size matters too and GT is a good indication of how big the ship is. If you're looking for excitement the bigger the ship the more things are added onboard. Keep in mind though that in some cases bigger doesn't mean better. Luxury cruise lines often operate smaller ships.

Number of Passengers - Like gross tons the number of passengers is something to consider. Is your taste small and intimate or big, bold and busy.
